UPHOLD CONTRACT OF TOBACCO POOL

Attorney Ela Issues Statement on Modified Decision of Supreme Court.

Different claims are being advanced as the result of the modification of the Wisconsin supreme court's original ruling on the eastern Wisconsin Cooperative Tobacco pool, covering all growers in this state, whether they are pool members or not.

For the second time the constitutionality of the pool contract and marketing methods was questioned by the Milwaukee tobacco companies. Wisconsin. The supreme court some months ago upheld a permanent injunction restraining Bekkedal, or any other independents, from purchasing tobacco from growers signed under the five year pool contract. A rehearing was ordered and a decision rendered after a new Justice, W. C. O'Brien, A final decision on the issue is expected from the United States supreme court.

Denial that there is any material change in the former decision of the state supreme court regarding the validity of the pool, was made in a statement by Emerson Ela, chief counsel of the pool and its business manager.

W.H. Press Cases.

Attorney Ela stated that any action deemed by the pool to be in violation of the court's injunction will be prosecuted immediately.

"The position of the tobacco pool is that the modification of the injunction order does not in any way affect the position of the pool," Mr. Ela said. "The supreme court has merely made it possible for Mr. Bekkedal to buy tobacco when three things occur, namely, when the contract with the pool has been breached by a grower, and when a grower has escaped his obligations with the pool and when his membership therein has been terminated. There is no method provided either by the articles of organization or by the by-laws of the corporation by which a member may sever his relations or on which he may withdraw from the membership of the pool during the time the contract is in effect."

Hold to Contract.

The contract which every grower signed with the pool expressly provides that the pool shall, in case of breach or threatened breach of contract, be entitled to an injunction to prevent breach or further breach. Furthermore, the pool takes the position that under the provisions of the present statute, neither Mr. Bekkedal nor anyone else can buy a crop of tobacco from a grower who belongs to the pool and whose contract has been breached outside of the town, city or village where the maker of the contract resides without subjecting himself to liability to the pool for entire value of the crop.

"The pool will continue to resist to the limit of its capacity any attempt of the legislature to prohibit Bekkedal from destroying business of the pool. The pool furthermore takes the position that if Mr. Bekkedal purchases any tobacco from any member of the pool until all the three things specified by the supreme court occur, he subjects himself to punishment for contempt of court."

Madison—Students of the Wisconsin college of agriculture are following closely with a state senator, following in course of Swiss cheese making being given here.

Herman Bilgren, state senator and oldest Swiss cheesemaker of Dodge county, is dressed in overalls and attending the classes just like the younger men. In spite of his 23

"The last cheesemakers' convention interested me so on account of the Swiss cheese debate that I feel it is my duty as the oldest Swiss maker of Dodge county to join in with you to learn the most modern methods," wrote Bilgren in his letter of application. "I feel I intend this coming winter I can receive our young men now in Dodge county to come here next winter to learn to make better block and round Swiss."

There are 26 Swiss cheesemakers enrolled in the course, most of them from Green, Lafayette and southern Wisconsin counties, with one from Illinois.

MEETING SATURDAY.

A good attendance is expected at the poultry association meeting to be held Saturday afternoon in the court house here. The meeting will open at 1:30 p. m. Organization of a Rock County Poultry association will be considered.

Aunt Nellie's Garden Peas

—with that farm garden flavor!

GATHERED in the morning and canned the same day is one of the big reasons Aunt Nellie's Garden Peas taste so sweet to you. No long transportation hauls and waits at the packing plant to wither the green peas so freshly tender.

Shelled, cleaned, washed, inspected and then parboiled in fresh, clear water. Enamored filling machines measure out the exact quantity in sterilized cans and cover the peas with eight ounces of sparkling spring water, sugar and salt. The cans are then hermetically sealed and cooked under pressure. Everywhere that fidelity to the old fashioned ideals of cleanliness in a shining white farm kitchen.

Is it any wonder Aunt Nellie's Garden Peas taste better?

Ask for them by name!

Tries Kellogg's Bran restores health after 12 years of intense suffering

Mr. Firth writes that he suffered for 12 years from constipation and his friend for 10 years—a total of 22 years' suffering, permanently relieved by Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumblized.

Gentlemen:

For 12 years I had been troubled with indigestion caused mostly by constipation. Until about a year ago I would suffer from 4 to 20 weeks at a time.

I happened to see your Krumblized Bran in a store, purchased a package and got almost immediate relief. I am still eating the Krumblized Bran every day.

The most wonderful results obtained with your Krumblized Bran I will now state. A gentleman who has been taking medicine for about 10 years for constipation could not find anything to give him relief. Three weeks ago I advised him to try Krumblized Bran and I told him that if it did not help him to get out from it. The gentleman in question purchased a box, and he told me that for the first time in ten years he is regular without taking medicine.

Yours for success,

William Firth, Jr., 65 Volan St., Merchantville, N. J.

ONLY IDLE GOSSIP AND CONJECTURE IN HIS OWN MIND

"$26,000 for the paper?" Senator Lenroot interjected.

"Yes," Mr. Vandepill continued. "All the inferences were in there, rumors that you much more could get the paper than I need, and anybody connected with the oil business had paid any money in the transaction. I hoped that by bringing out the slander, you gentlemen on this committee, would get at the truth and clear the memory of President Harding."

Would Truth Follow Standers from many sources but that none who related them to him professed to have any facts.

"I believe it important these rumors be stopped," he said. "There would follow the heels of Standers from many sources but that none who related them to him professed to have any facts."

"Did you think it likely that truth would follow on the heels of Standers?" Chairman Lenroot queried.

"That by uttering these things which are slander or not, you were fulfilling your patriotic duty?"

Mr. Vandepill insisted his purpose was as given, "because rumors like these make 'reds' faster than any Soviet propaganda."

Asked why he didn't come to the committee first, Vandepill said he did not realize that the oil committee was interested in the sale of newspapers.

The banker said he had heard rumors about the sale of the Star is a distinct difference between rumors and gossip. When you get these things in responsible quarters, you'd better look out."

"You say this committee believed your only purpose was to clear Mr. Harding's memory?"

"It was, I'm a life long republican.

Lenroot Argued.

Chairman Lenroot read another excerpt from the speech to the effect that the committee had failed to press the Fall examination because the ex-secretary might "pench" on other men.

Mr. Vandepill admitted he had not known Secretary Fall refused to testify, claiming immunity, although that fact was published prominently in practically every paper in the country.

"Do you say these things without knowledge of the facts?" Chairman Lenroot thundered at the witness.

"I had some information," Mr. If you have found that a witness Vandepill said, "was an inference, cannot testify without gaining immunity for a crime, then I was wrong."

Senator Adams, democrat, Colorado, then took up the examination. "How many people spoke to you concerning these rumors about the Marion Star?"

"Oh, possibly a dozen. Rumors were current in New York and Washington; they were general. Rumors were more serious than gossip, mere idle talk."

Mr. Vandepill No Names.

Senator Adams asked for names of his informants.

"I do not care to give names," Vandepill replied. "There were many people. In no case did they profess to know the facts. They were deeply concerned about the matter."

The request for names was pressed repeatedly but always brought the same reply.

Vandepill's examination ended after he had been on the stand an hour and 42 minutes.

dear son, dead, and enclosing it (Schaufler) on a stretcher on the streets of Watertown, and you were at the head. I think it was because I was thinking of how we fooled around when I was boarding at your place."

The state's star witness unburdened herself concerning the reason for holding Ernest Kufahl. She said:

"I've held Ernest until I couldn't hold him any longer and had to let it go."

Relative to the first confession, she said:

"I thought I couldn't live another day. No one knows how I suffered. Had he told me what he told me, I would have told him I had just had a thousand pounds off my mind."

She explained her reason for keeping secret the real cause of death.

"I wanted death to go away, so I went on and no one asked me, and I kept it. And I couldn't tell. I tried many times to tell and one time told my sister to come out and see me. When she got there I couldn't tell her."

Confession Plot

The re-cross examination by Mr. Zabel, concerning the attempts to poison her children, unmasked the woman more than anything else during the two days which she had been on the stand. Withholding as though in agony, with her head bowed down and sobbing into her handkerchief, Mrs. Schaufler was forced to admit that she plotted to destroy her children.

"I didn't want to kill them," she cried.

Many love letters written by Kufahl to Mrs. Schaufler were introduced.

During the morning session, Mrs. Schaufler affectionately closed some of her letters with, "Your little maid" and "This fussy little person."

In one of the letters which Mr. Zabel introduced, she had declared in her letter to Kufahl's sister, Josephine, "I know you think Ernest has fallen and I don't think he hasn't any more."

Josephine, my dear, if you will but stop a minute, where could you find a cleaner and neater young man than he is?"

Children Ordered Out

Judge Fowler ordered all children out of the court room, but the two children of Mrs. Schaufler, Fowler is attempting to hurry the case through, but is somewhat hindered by the zealousness of both sides to get in everything that might have a bearing on the case. The trial in this case will go over until next week.

One of the star-witnesses for the state is expected to be Frank Breitbender, the other roomer at the Schaufler home, at the time of Ed. Schaufler's death.

LENFELL PRAISES PEOPLE OF NORTH

700 Hear Striking Lecture on Labrador — Fascinating Story Is Told.

Perhaps no man has ever spoken to a Janesville audience, who has not once so great a record of achievement and so complete an absence of scandal in speaking of it, as Dr. Wilford T. Grenfell, who lectured on "Mist Ice and Snow in Labrador," at the high school auditorium Thursday night. Nearly 700 persons were present.

"The lure of the north that we hear about is the character of the people," asserted Dr. Grenfell. "I have seen 30 years of life in those lands. I have never known of one divorce, or of one suicide, or of one case of nervous breakdown—'nervous proverty,' we call it."

Magnetic, alert, modest, Dr. Grenfell impressed his audience with the personality of his fascinating story of his hardy people among whom his life has been spent. His references to his own part in the work deprecate.

Praise for Fishermen

"It is nonsense to talk about sacrifice," he said, "all of us in Labrador would rather be there than anywhere else."

But whenever he spoke of the sea, he spoke with a contagious enthusiasm.

Of the men with whom he works, Dr. Grenfell said, "Men of the sea, fishermen, are the finest people on earth. They are of the stock who sailed with Drake and Raleigh, with Franklin and Cook, and of the stock that manned the Mayflower and the great ships of history, and of the stock, too, that Christ chose for his disciples—nor did he choose wrongly."

Is Sad Plight

He pictured their poverty and ignorance of school things, and the taught in books, their splendid personal and local loyalty. They are now in precisely the plight of the farmer, he stated—their European markets gone and their produce worth little if any more than its cost to them.

For these men, Grenfell's work was in the first instance medical, but as the need of preventive medicine and public health increased, it has steadily widened. He has worked for prohibition, which he stated to be, "not a perfect method for making a new world, but the greatest help to the fisherman." He has introduced reindeer from Norway to supply the country's need of domestic animals, stored salteries, institutions of learning, and other institutions of the same kind.

The doctor is a profound Christian, but a profoundly practical one.

New York, September 14, 1851. In 1862, he came with his parents to Janesville, Orrin, even as a boy, was always doing something. When 11 years of age, he got a job sorting potatoes in a grocery store at the corner of State and Main street. Here he met Fred Pullen, who was the owner. He attended school in Janesville for two years and then went with his parents to a farm two miles south of the city. The senior Bates moved to a farm in the town of La Prairie in 1864 and Orrin attended school in what was known as the "old school house." He graduated from the University of Illinois in 1874 and became up teaching and moved to Janesville and Mr. Bates has lived here continuously ever since, with the exception of a summer which he spent in a young man working in Iowa. In early life he was employed from time to time in grocery and provision stores and learned the business thoroughly. After clerking for J. Hall from 1874 to 1887 the firm of Hall & Bates was formed and continued to 1893, when the business was sold.

In February, 1893, Mr. Bates was married to Emma Vanwagner at the time when W. J. Millard, secretary of the National Municipal League, spoke.

The meeting was called by Mayor C. C. Clegg and was attended by 800 of whom 750 voted in favor of the plan. Petitions were circulated after the meeting.

A delegation from Manitowoc attended the meeting and Mr. Millard was asked to speak there in the near future.

The Lying Lips of Gossip

Gossip has lying lips though it may have an honest face. That any man should in a public speech utter what he afterwards admits is purely hearsay, and that he has no knowledge of beyond the questionable conjecture and poisoned viciousness that would start such gossip, is almost unbelievable. Frank Vanderlip has had an honorable name in finance. He has lost whatever value there was in that name. His hands are black and grimy with the mud he threw at the tomb of the dead president. Immediate, detailed denial of any shade or shadow of any transaction involving Warren G. Harding in a deal that could not stand the light of day, has been made. But this will be ineffective for many generations.
Grant was similarly traduced. It took many years for the people to know that Grant came from his administration with clean hands, and that a grave injustice had been done him. Mr. Vander-lip, under the guise and cloak of friendship, has committed a great crime against the dead.

There seems to be only one way out of the Herrin troubles and that is to give Williamson county to Mexico permanently.

Mr. Kelley Is Right

John M. Kelley is right when he says what we need in Wisconsin among the farmers is less advertising of his politics and more advertising of Wisconsin products. We have cheese in this state that can't be beat anywhere on earth, yet we have no one calling for Wisconsin cheese. Why not?

Because we hide it under some other name, or no name at all, or fail to let the public know about it. We have here in Rock county a great crop of honey annually, and more being produced. It is a good money crop. It is growing better all the time and there is more honey being used each year. It ought to be marketed through advertising. It should first be standardized and a common attractive label be made for all producers to use and then go on the market.

When a user wanted honey he should be trained to ask for Wisconsin honey or what is better

Rock county honey. That is the way to build a solid stable business. It is so with cheese.

There is no reason why anyone should want the imported Swiss cheese after using good Green county cheese—the kind with the holes in it, well cured and marketable under standard inspection.

Today the public depends for its desire to buy any article, on the printed word. Advertising stimulates desire to buy. There has never been a time when advertising has been so carefully read as now. Mr. Kelley is carrying the message of advertising Wisconsin products to all parts of the state. It will take time to organize the farmers and producers into a full realization of the necessity for advertising. But it will come, and then we shall see the demand for products so increased that it will be a matter of production rather than a place to sell. In the meantime we can spare a number of political leaders who believe that laws will legislate money into pockets of the people without giving attention to higher economic laws.

The Best Lincoln Poem.

Each year there is written at the time of the birthday of Lincoln much verse, some good, much of it bad. Out of the many poems of 1924 there is one that appeals. It was printed in the Kansas City Times and its author is Muriel Brewster.

They call'd him homely, but a beauty rare,
Shame on that rugged face we know so well,
The deep-set eyes that tell of visions seen,
And mystic, brooding sadness lingers there.
They say he died at an assassin's hand—
We know he lives; his soul is here today,
His eyes still glowing in that magic way,
Lighting the farthest corner of our land—
The land he loved so well, he gave his life,
And gave his death, that it might ever be
The nation that he visioned, far from strife,
And free from every form of slavery.
Lincoln, in thy dear memory today,
We lift our hearts—to keep thy dream we pray.

One casualty is reported from a Mexican battle.

An anonymous offer of $500,000 for a prize fish has reached New York from Shelby, Montana. Someone out there must have got hold of a lot of German marks.

The public is so little interested in the name of the man who got the Bok peace prize that it would be safe to wager that he will be entirely forgotten a year from now. The only man who will be remembered will be Bok and then only on account of the cash he has.

If we ever get the parties who robbed the United States out of several billions of dollars during the war and have been rich ever since, the record will make Teapot Dome look like a handful of German marks.

It does appear that the oil painting being made in congress takes a lot of artists.

PITY THE POOR PARTY WHIP.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington.—As the tale is told, Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, had a strange dream one night. He dreamed that he died and went to heaven, where all good Republicans expect to go, and presented his credentials at the pearl portal. Saint Peter took but a glance at the great record of mundane affairs ere he threw wide the gates and said:

"Enter and welcome! Your credentials say, and the record affirms, that you were the Republican whip of the United States Senate during the session of 1923-24. Boy! Pave job and tell him to go. And if he does dream, he would probably have a nightmare in which he found himself in purgatory with the same kind of job he now holds. However, the story is probably as authentic as any of those that are retailed in the Senate cloakrooms, and it serves to convey some idea of the present trials and tribulations of the senator from Kansas.

The job of party whip in any legislative body is never listed among the soft smacks of life. At best it is a thankless job, which only a man with an exalted conception of his party duty could be persuaded to undertake. Briefly stated, the whip's task is to see that all his fellow partisans are present and voting, and voting right, when measures and questions come up that present a political aspect. If his party is hopelessly in the minority, his responsibilities are not great, because it matters comparatively little whether the party registers its full strength on a given issue. On the other hand, if his party has an overwhelming majority, the whip is not overworked, for it is fairly certain that his forces will always have votes to spare in any ordinary test of strength.

But when his party has only a nominal and not a real majority, when there are half a dozen different blocs and conditions, when the balance of power is held by a small group of members only too prone to kick over the traces on every and any occasion, and when the party lash has lost its sting, then pity the poor whip! And that's the kind of proposition Senator Curtis is up against.

Under the most favorable conditions United States Senators are difficult to corral. Some of them are absent minded and never remember to be on hand when they are needed most. Some of them are bound to death by the tutuia of Senate debates and, if they were confined to their desks, would pick the padlocks. Some of them are always having business anywhere except on Capitol hill. Some of them are always candidates for re-election and have to be making frequent trips back home to look after their fences. Some of them are running for President and are often away keynote-ing in one section of the country or another.

It is the whip's business to know the habits and peculiarities of all the group which he must look after. If they are not on the floor or in the smoking room at any given moment, the whip is supposed to know where they are to be found and to be able to reach them with an emergency call.

And then there is the little matter of lining them up to vote right. In the not so long ago, republican senators on the floor would simply prick up their ears to hear how Aldrich voted and then ask to be recorded likewise, and those who came scurrying in answering to the bell or the whip's message merely inquired if the Rhode Island senator had voted "aye" or "no" and answered the clerk accordingly. But those were the good old days of party discipline, and like the halcyon days they are no more. Aldrich, the great leader, has passed away, and so has the idea that a senator elected as a republican or as a democrat necessarily should always vote as one. That's one of the reasons Senator Curtis is up against the present republican whip is busier far than the traditional one-armed paperhanger and would be unable to hang up a 100 per cent efficiency record if he had the power to issue writs of habeas corpus, capias and mandamus and had a posse comitatus to serve and enforce them.

When the session opened in December it was apparent that Senator Curtis would have his work cut out for him, and the show-down came promptly in the matter of the Senator Cummins and the chairmanship of the Interstate Commerce Committee. The regular republicans decreed that the Iowan should retain that chairmanship, in addition to being president pro tem of the senate, but the progressives balked and by throwing their votes with the democrats and the farmer-laborites they had the power to defeat Cummins.

It developed upon Senator Curtis to hold the regular forces intact and set that they were all present on each ballot lest the opposition slip one over. He did this day after day. In the end he went down with his colors flying, for when the progressives decided to vote for the democratic candidate, Senator Smith, the fight was over. That there was no extreme bitterness as an aftermath of this unprecedented procedure —never before has a minority senator been made chairman of an important committee—is credited to the fact that it will be a matter of production rather than a place to sell. In the meantime
we can spare a number of political leaders who believe that laws will legislate money into pockets of the people without giving attention to higher economic laws.

JUST FOLKS

BY EDGAR A. GUEST.

A WINTER DAY

White is the garden with snow,
And the place where the tulips will grow in the spring is as barren and bare
As a heart that is torn by despair.

There's a moon in the breeze and a night
On the lips of the trees, and the sky
Lies over the rose bed as bleak
As the pallor of grief on a check.

Yet I stand at the pane in my room
And see where the roses shall bloom,
And I turn to a patch 'neath the snow
Where some day the tulips shall grow.

I have faith in the blue of the sky
When the long days of winter go by,
I have faith in the bud and the leaf,
If he does dream, he would probably have a nightmare in which he found himself in purgatory with the same kind of job he now holds.

"Good enough," said Derr. "You want to catch the murderer of Sile Thompson, don't you?"

"Naturally."

"So do I—naturally. Let me alone and I'll catch him."

The sheriff leaned back in his chair and scratched his head. He was dead, he'd been flipped into the wooden box filled with sawdust that served him as a casket and rolled another. When the cigarette was going well, he looked at Derr through the smoke.

"Bull," said he. "I was hasty about that perjury because, after all, I didn't know. I had a suspicion, and I still have it, but I don't know you ain't mixed up in the killing of Sile Thompson."

In all truth, this was bold enough; the sheriff had not really intended to say more than he started the sentence. But Derr's matter-of-fact manner had lured him on. He almost held his breath after he spoke. What would Derr do? Bold as he was, the sheriff had much ado to hold his cigarette with steadiness. Derr would certainly do something. What was he waiting for? The sheriff could divine nothing from Derr's expression.

"I suppose just it," said Derr suddenly. "You don't know."

"I said you don't know."

The sheriff's boldness took another turn. "I told the Judge I thought you had something to do with it."

"What did the Judge say?"

"He thought like I did, only there wasn't enough evidence to arrest you."

Derr, knowing better, absorbed the lie with equanimity. "That's where the Judge showed good sense," he told the sheriff warmly. "He never goes off half-cocked. I take it kind-

Dinner Stories

Applications for membership in the New York Newspaper club require the aspirants to set down the "name in full," "business address," "home address" and "occupation." Then follows a special heading, "newspaper experience," on which they describe the extent and character of their service.

When William Randolph Hearst, recently elected to active membership, filled out his application blank he found one word sufficient under the entry "newspaper experience." It was:

"Plenty."

The minister had come home with the Browns for dinner. When they sat down to the meal Mr. Brown asked the guest to say grace. This he did. However, the preacher talked so softly that those at the table did not hear his whisper "Amen."

A boy, though, had been watching the minister out of one corner of his eye, so when the family still sat with bowed heads after the grace was finished, he exclaimed: "All heads up and let's go to eatin'!"

Dr. F. M. Bradley, now president of the Texas College of Industrial Arts, tells this story: Dr. Bradley has been state superintendent of schools, president of the Texas Institute for the blind and director of the department of extension of the University of Texas. He arrived in Fort Worth, Tex., to address a gathering of teachers. The local superintendent arose to present the ex-president with a certificate of appreciation. He said:

"Mildred and gentlewoman, I have great pleasure in introducing the Ex—the Ex—Ex—I know we are all glad to have with us today the Ex-Honorable F. M. Bradley."

Says—Now Stiff Joints Must Go!

New Discovery Joints Up and Even the Cracking Ceases.

Yes: it's true—the world progresses.

All you have to do nowadays is to rub up that stiff, crusty knee joint to squeeze a half inch of miracle working substance from a tube.

Then rub it on the offending part for about a quarter of a minute or until it soaks through the skin and disappears on its errand of mercy.

Then read the evening newspapers and go to bed.

The effects are that your misbehaving knee joint will lose its "weak" while you are dreaming about the high fences you used to leap when you were a youngster.

"And in the morning," says one who has tried the new discovery, "you'll feel so happy that you'll want to jump into your sportiest clothes and walk briskly down the street to show the neighbors that you are not as old as they think you are."

Joint Ease: They call this wonder working substance, for the reason that when ordinary remedies fail to rub up the stiff, inflamed rheumatic joints or reduce the swelling.

It's a good name for a good, clean, sinless prescription that in just a few months has proven to a multitude of people that lame, swollen, distorted joints can speedily have the winds taken out of them and work again like ever.

The Joint Ease is for both joints, whether in knee, ankle, hip, shoulder, spine or finger, and for that purpose its sale is immense.

All good druggists have a big supply of it and dispense it every hour upon a big demand.

Good dispositions succumb. Irritability and snappy retorts take the place of happiness and amiability. Sunshine is driven out of homes. In fact, they are often wrecked, and friends are estranged because women suffer with ailments peculiar to their sex. The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will overcome such ailments and restore health and happiness. DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT
KIDNEY POISON

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Hurts You, Begin Taking Salts.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the waste products which help to renew the vital organs and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't live too much longer if you stay too much longer. See any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts: take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the ash of peaches and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys and to neutralize the acids in the system so that they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will soon be rid of the trouble of your kidney trouble and backache. All means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

WHERE HER DUTY LIES

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a woman of 32 and have been married eight years. Two years after our marriage my husband was sick for nine weeks and during that time lost his position. We hadn't much money and simply did not have gotten along if it had not been that my mother-in-law came to help him in his care. She has been here ever since. Now we have two children, a boy of 4 and a little baby girl of 10 weeks.

As it happens mother is dependent on us now, because she lost her weight. This is always a mistake and results in indigestion and the necessity of putting the baby on a much weaker formula, and then no weeks without gain until he is able to take a food that is strong enough to build him up.

My husband would like to build a house, but it seems to me I can't leave mother in spite of the things she says. I know in reality she does not mean them. My husband sees this too, but he says mother does not need to live alone because she can come and live with us. When we have talked of it to her she has flatly refused to listen to our plan.

I really don't know where my duty lies.

MRS. T. D. S.

It seems to me your mother is finding a way for your children to have more freedom. The change will mean much to your husband and the children, and it need not be made at the sacrifice of your mother. She will be given every opportunity to make her home with you; you have no occasion to feel that you are doing anything but your duty toward her.

Even if she refuses to make her home with you at first, she will soon get tired of living alone and will miss you and the children. By the time she does, you will be in a better frame of mind to co-operate with you to keep harmony and a spirit of contentment in your new home. If she went along right away, she might incur an injury which would be unpleasant for you.

As it happens mother is dependent on us now, because she lost her weight. He has always been grateful to my mother for the help she gave us at the time when we needed it so terribly. But mother does not like my husband and slight him in little ways every day. Although my husband pays rent and all the expenses of the table and cleaning up the house, mother seems to think we have no rights. At times it is hard to bear the things she says to us.

As it happens mother is dependent on us now, because she lost her weight.

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

Soap should be utilized very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Milled coconut oil shampoo, which is pure and greaseless, and is better than anything else you can use.

An old soap can be utilized as a receptacle for paraffin, and tops from jars make an abundance of rich, creamy lanolin, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair shiny and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

Tens of thousands of thin, run-down men—yes, and women too—are getting discouraged—are giving up all hope of ever being able to take up flesh and look healthy and strong.

Such people can stop worrying and start to smile right now for Metoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, which any druggist will tell you all about, is putting flesh on hosts of skinny folks every day.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, put on 16 pounds in five weeks and feels fine.

We all know that Cod Liver Oil is full of vitamin D, producing vitamins, but many people can't take it because of its horrid smell and fishy taste, and because it often upsets the stomach.

KUFAHL IS SLAYER OF HER HUSBAND

ness replied, raising and lowering her head to make it emphatic.

Says He Mixed Poison.

On the chart she pointed out the cupboard from which she said Ernest Kufahl took down the bottle of strychnine, as the defendant bent forward in his chair, intent upon seeing all.

"Where were you when Ernest mixed the strychnine in the prune juice?" "I was standing near the kitchen pump."

"Did you see Ernest take the prune juice from the cupboard?"

"Did you see him take the strychnine out of the cupboard?" the state prosecutor asked.

"Yes, I did."

Mrs. Schaudne said she recognized the bottle as containing strychnine which she had purchased some time before to poison rats.

"How did he put it in the prune juice?"

"He shook some of it in from the bottle," the witness said.

"State whether or not you or he said anything when he mixed the strychnine in the prune juice."

"I did. I said, 'Why Ernest, that's poison.' He said, 'All medicines are poison, don't you know that?' I am only giving him enough to relieve the pain."

Relating what followed after Schaudne's death, Myrtle Schaudne said she did not see Kufahl until some time later that morning, when she approached him and said, "Oh, Ernest, you fixed that too strong."

"Yes, and I'll fix you if you say anything," she testified.

The jury heard testimony concerning the pump she used, when she carried milk and eggs from his room on the second floor, and of several times when Kufahl is said to have kissed her. The woman said the familiarity and intimate relations developed more after her husband's death.

Referred to Death.

"Ed is getting pretty old and may die pretty soon. I'll wait for you," Mrs. Schaudne quoted Kufahl as having said.

"I guess Ed is going to croak pretty soon. What would you do if he did?" the woman said her lover had said on another occasion.

"My life isn't worth living without him," she testified she replied to him.

The incident of the barn when she pictured Kufahl as making love to her with one arm around her waist as he held in the other, the pall into which she sent a stream of milk from the cow which she was milking, was also mentioned.

Kufahl, one day after Ed Schaudne had been buried, told her that he had been to confession and everything was cleared up, the witness testified. Previously he had found his eyes and told her not to cry as "You'll break down and then tell something and you mustn't do that," she declared. He had told her.

Proposed Marriage.

A proposal that she marry him was made by Kufahl on the first anniversary of her husband's death, she testified.

"I said, 'Ernest, before I give you my answer, I want to know whether you meant to do with your wife what you did.' He said, 'What do you think?'" I said, 'I've always thought you didn't mean to do it.' He said, 'I didn't mean to do it.'

Mrs. Schaudne said Kufahl then told her that she mustn't break up with him and when she refused, "was becoming too eager a burden," telling her that she would be the one to suffer, that he would say he knew absolutely nothing about it and also said that it would "kill his mother" if she knew he did such a thing."

Threat Is Charged.

A story of Kufahl threatening Mrs. Schaudne while holding a revolver in his hand, after he begged her to take back a statement she had written that she was sorry she had ever married him, was given for the first time. She failed to mention the gun she said.

An agreement that they make mutual wills so the property of one would go to the other in event of death was suggested by Kufahl on her visit to McGrath in August, 1922, Mrs. Schaudne said.

After arguing, her testimony that Kufahl attempted to persuade Ed Schaudne to "fix" Frank Breit-schneider from the home on his accusation that the other boarders had gone through his suitcase, was allowed to stand. Mrs. Schaudne identified a letter which she had received from McGrath written Jan. 15, 1922, to McGrath, Minn.

With the state concluding its direct examination of Mrs. Schaudne after 1 hour and 45 minutes of questioning, the woman was from then until adjournment at 5:45 subjected to cross-examination by W. C. Zabel, Milwaukee, the prosecuting attorney, and the defense. The woman was forced to admit the details of the affair between her and Kufahl, which she had been spared at the hands of the state.

Shares Cross Questioning.

Through the questioning of Attorney Zabel, the jury was shown that the woman courted the controversial Kufahl, and that she was placed in visits to his room, where she carried eggnog and milk and cream, on her husband's orders. This, she explained, was done to help her husband sleep.

When she bought the home on Main street in Whitewater, Ernest Kufahl loaned her $825, without asking to make a payment.

With immediate return in Ernest Kufahl's statement that it would help her husband, she said she hadn't the slightest fear of the consequences of her husband drinking the prune juice.

Disscrepancy Stressed.

Questioned concerning the discrepancy in her testimony at the trial and the preliminary examination, Mrs. Schaudne said, "Kufahl was drinking in the prune juice, she said when she sat at the preliminary examination that she didn't see him, she referred to the amount. She was unable to explain what caused Kufahl to mix the strychnine in prune juice, said Ed Schaudne, on the bright, that he had admitted he felt better than he had during his illness. She also admitted that she hadn't told her husband there was strychnine in the prune juice. Attorney Zabel dwelt considerably on the fact that though throughout the entire period she had slept well with her husband, that she crawled into bed on the night of his death. This, she explained, was at his request.

Judge Fowler granted the request of Attorney Zabel and asked the district attorney to allow him to see the confession which Mrs. Schaudne made the night of her arrest. Though the cross-examination was not concluded, Judge Fowler adjourned court at 5:45 p.m.

New testimony given by Mr. Copplins was that he had told the brother and sister of Ed Schaudne, after they returned from that funeral, that he was very sickly indeed, and that the death of Edward Schaudne was from poisoning. He declared he pursued the subject further than to question Dr. Dunn to see if he held the same views. Dr. Dunn did not attend Schaudne, Dr. Charles Dike did, but Copplins said nothing to him, he testified.

Intense rigidity of the muscles and a glassy stare in the eyes was noticed by both Mr. Copplins and Mrs. Moriarity. Mrs. Moriarity said Mrs. Schaudne had told her she did not know what had caused her husband to die.

COMMENT ON THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 17, 1924.

Joshua 1 to 24.

WM. SOUTHERN, JR.

A very dear friend, a devout Christian, objected to a suggestion made in these comments a few weeks ago. The suggestion was that Moses had probably in his youth visited the place where the Hebrews escaped from Egypt across the Red Sea and had seen an East wind pile back the waters and leave an open pathway. He said he preferred to believe that Moses was simply and blindly following God's commandments when he escaped under his red cloud, and when he exposed his back to each side and left no passage.

The suggestion was not made for controversy, but to emphasize the way God does things, the way he accomplished miracles in Moses time and the way he has accomplished miracles now. This is illustrated clearly in the lesson we are studying today.

A week ago was told the story of the failure of the people to cross the Jordan and occupy the promised land. The people were told that they remained for nearly 40 years in the desert, that could have sent them across the river and given them a victory then. He could have paralyzed the Apolites and the Perizites and the Hittites and the Canaanites, he could have caused their numbers to fall down and he could have given the land to his people then. But he did nothing of the kind.

Instead he made men and warriors out of them. He left them in the desert where they had to work for living, where they had to defend themselves against wild animals and snakes. When there is no place to exercise initiative and strength and devise ways and means to keep alive and raise their families. He left them until the older generation those initiative had been killed by slavery and had nothing left them but the wilderness until a new generation of hardhanded, resourceful, fearless and self-reliant men had risen and were ready to go up against anything and were not afraid because the land was occupied by giants.

This study covers the period of the conquest of Canaan. Moses was the great leader, the great organizer, the great law giver, but Moses was not the man to lead in a life of conquest. Joshua was the warrior and under his leadership the Hebrews, reborn into freedom after 40 years of servitude, began life overrunning Canaan and sweet like a blazing fire across the country. Cities were taken and the owners slaughtered, no obstacle could stop them and presently they had driven out the owners of this good land and when the cities destroyed, the children lost, turn it over to them. If this had been his method he would have sent them across the Jordan 40 years before. Had he done so they would have been whipped to a smarzle and driven back into the desert in defeat.

A resume of this story may be found in the 23rd chapter of the book of Joshua. Joshua led the Hebrews to victory and then had sent out surveyors who divided the land into parts as nearly equal in value as possible and had given by lot to each of the 12 tribes a part. He had lived a long life and a useful and busy one and now he came to die. He called together the Elders and the Generals and the Captains and delivered his farewell address. This address is found in the last chapter of the book which bears his name in the greatest paragraph in the chapter. It is this:

"Choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites in whose land ye dwell; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

It is in my heart to wish that the present day people in this United States could stop for a little while the mad whirl of soft living, leave for a little while the automobiles in the garages and stay away from the pictures showing enough to study the history of the country, how it was founded and built, the struggles of the pioneers who, but a short while ago, overcame obstacles, fought off the Indians, subdued the rivers and the mountains and built the cities. In this review they could see the direetting hand of God just as easily as we were shown to the successful Hebrews when Joshua reviewed the story and pointed out the times and places.

Then they would hear the words of Joshua "Choose you this day whom ye will serve" and his closest friends gathered when he was an old man, he who had been a fighter and a leader and a king. "As we have served our God, so will we serve him."

A lot of young people nowadays seem to think that to be a Christian is to be a sissy, a sort of a pansy, a softie, a wimp. Let us look at Joshua and what he did, a look at those who followed him and who fought against odds, should give them pause. Sometimes we find it difficult to tell whether man is taking his religion hard or is just taking fun of it. I am sure that the religious leaders of this country are not doing their best to make people realize that a church member must wear a long face and never smile nor have any fun. There is a great difference between religion and piety. I have seen men so phious that wanted to knock the look off their faces. I am inclined to like the cowboy who, in his famous song, sang of that if he knew what he was foreordained to do he would do something else.

This lesson gives us a picture of a great religious leader, a man who was also a great fighter, a man who demanded the blood and the flesh and led them in desperate ventures.

A man who also stood close to God and whose faith never faltered and who gave God the credit for his success and who, when he came to die, called his people about him and told them:

"Choose you this day whom ye will serve, but as for me and my house we will serve the Lord."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre At Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess. While gray, faded hair is not strong, we desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time; by saturating all gray hairs, we also prevent the hair from applying to them, two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

CITY WATER PLANT REPORTS PROFIT

Net Income of $11,000 for 1923 Is $7,000 Increase Over Previous Year.

A net income of $11,000 is reported by the city water department for the year 1923, a gain of nearly $7,000 over the 1922 net income figure of $3,530.

Pumpage last year, as figured from piston displacement, was 664,000,000 gallons, an average of 1,800,000 gallons per day. The 1922 pumpage was slightly lower, the figure being given as 574,000,000 gallons.

Data not referred to 1922 operations is not contained in the department's annual report just filed with the railroad commission and the city council.

Total assets of the plant have increased to the three-quarter million dollar mark, the actual figure being listed as $743,650.

Revenue from operation in 1923 amounted to $5,598, including $20,000 from hydraulic rental. Total operating expenses were $52,224.

The cost of pumpage and distribution is figured at $78.75 per million gallons, compared to $78.91 per million the previous year. The total gallons passed through meters in 1923 is given as 395,000,000, with 268,000,000 accounted for by the flat rate.

Pumping costs accounted for 27.64 per cent of the expenditures; taxes, 24 per cent; depreciation, 21 per cent; general, 12 per cent; distribution, 6 per cent; commercial, 6 per cent; undistributed, 2 per cent.

ELKHORN SCHOOLS USE OTIS TESTS

Intelligence Examinations Measure Ability of Grade Pupils.

Elkhorn — Otis intelligence tests are being used in the Elkhorn public school to establish a correlation between the judgment of the classroom teacher and the native ability of the pupil as measured by certain established standards.

The first three grades were given the Otis general intelligence test preliminary examination. The intelligence quotient of each child was determined by dividing the mental age of the child by his chronological age. A mark of 100 is deemed normal and those above this mark have better than normal intelligence; the proportion of "below average" children in these tests is lower in the first three grades but this is because the tests are different. Those from the fourth to eighth grade are fair in comparing.

Have Above 100.

Pupils whose marks are above them are: 100, better are: George Wilkinson, 123, and Allen Ludden, 122, first grade; Lillian Latham, 136, Mary Strong, 132, Jeanette Howe, 132, Martin Heineiman, 123, Shirley Stewart, 128, Margaret Lyon, 124, Priscilla Luckey, 124, Helen Crane, 124, Warren Williams, 122, Sylvus Gottschall, 124, Bert Leonard Coulton, Annie Melcher and Harriet Bell, 120, in second grade.

In the third grade, those high are as follows: Robert Bachhuber, 138; Ted Greenbeck, 135; Evelyn Howe, 132; Miriam Anderson, 130; Irene Lindrew, 130; Frances Wheeler, 128; Doris Rockingel, 127; George Young, 127; Helen Johnson, 126; Leontine Mondon, 126; Leatha Wilkinson, 126; Astrid Beaton, 125; Dorothy Ryan,
